Thinking Theologically was developed to support theologians, Church leaders, and Christians working in relief and development work to help envision and equip them for integral mission.

The gatherings provide space and opportunity for people take a break from their daily work and reflect on what the bible has to say about the nature of mission and explore what it means for their work in tackling poverty. Thinking Theology: Zimbabwe will focus on three main themes; integral mission, family and leadership, looking specifically at what this means in the Zimbabwean context. The programme has been designed to allow delegates to look at what impact a deeper understanding of holistic mission and a life of discipleship has upon particular topics related to poverty, relief and development, by thinking theologically about them.

Key objectives of the gathering include:

1. To supercharge the church into greater influence and action in integral mission
2. Inspiring courageous and relevant leadership and helping it spread
3. Addressing the changing modern family; broken relationships, gender, discipleship, whole life transformation, child protection
4. Going back to basics - including looking at discipleship
5. Create platforms for dialogue – encourage unity
6. Reflection, learning and understanding impact and accountability
7. Re-igniting effective and righteous prayer

We believe this event is essential to share hearts and minds and to mobilise the church and communities in Zimbabwe to be bringers of hope.

Come and be a part of this significant gathering of theological thinkers as we reflect and discuss ways to challenge, envision and equip the church to reveal the nature and reality of God's kingdom in the world today.
